Saudi Coffee: A Symbol of Tradition and Hospitality

In Saudi Arabia, coffee is more than just a drink — it is a symbol of Saudi hospitality and culture. It is usually served at the beginning of a guest's visit, often in a small coffee mug, and always half full as a sign of respect. Hosts typically offer 2 to 3 cups, never just one. Saudi coffee is often served with dates, sweet fruits that balance the coffee's bold flavor. The way people serve and drink Saudi coffee reflects generosity and tradition, making guests feel truly welcome.

The Arabian Tiger

The Arabian tiger, believed to have its origin in the Arabian Peninsula, is a rare and powerful example of its species. Though often confused with leopards, it is a type of big cat adapted to desert life. Its eating habits include hunting gazelles and small mammals. Known for its stealth and strength, it has amazing abilities like silent stalking and quick attacks. Sadly, due to habitat loss and hunting, its relationship with humans has often been harmful, leading to its endangered status.

Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

In some areas of the world, multigenerational families have always lived together in the same house. A multigenerational family is a family of different generations, for example, grandparents, parents, and children. In the United States, from 1940 through 2000, multigenerational living decreased. Americans dreamed of growing up, leaving their family home, and having a home of their own. Having one's own home was a status symbol. It showed that a person was independent and financially prosperous.

Grandparents, too, seemed happy with this arrangement. They saved enough money throughout their life to be able to live independently through their retirement years and to pay for outside care if they became ill. It has only been in recent years that this trend has begun to change. A slower economy and fewer jobs have caused people to have less money than they once did.

Americans are beginning to find it too expensive to live separately. The Clark family from Virginia is a good example of this phenomenon. The Clarks are a multigenerational family that were living in three different houses. The great-grandparents lived in an expensive retirement home, the grandparents lived in their large, old family home, and the parents lived with their two young children in a small apartment. All of the family members were struggling financially. They didn't have enough money to live comfortably in their separate homes. So, the Clark family sold all three of their homes and bought one, large, old, wooden farmhouse that had enough room for all of them to live in comfort together. The Clarks say they are happier now that they are all together. They are now able to share the chores around the house as well as the cost of the house. And, while they were once too busy to see each other often, now they have more time to see each other as well as spend more time on leisure activities. So, for now at least, it looks like the trend of living in multigenerational families will continue in the United States.

A- Answer these questions:

1 - What is a multigenerational family?

2 - Were some of the family members struggling financially.?

3- What did the Clark family sell?

1-The Clarks say they are happier now that they are all together.

Guided Words [juicy -tender- meatballs- Paratha -flavors and spices - vanished- angry]

In a quiet corner of a bustling Saudi home, the aroma of flavors and spices danced through the air — cinnamon, cumin, coriander, and a whisper of cardamom. On a gleaming silver platter lay a stack of freshly made paratha, warm and flaky, just waiting to scoop up the stars of the meal: juicy, tender meatballs. These weren't ordinary meatballs. They had been simmered slowly in a rich tomato and onion gravy, infused with traditional Saudi spices that clung to every bite. The first taste was enough to silence the table. The meatballs melted on the tongue, each one a small explosion of warmth and depth. One moment, the platter was full. The next — vanished. Not a smear of sauce, not a crumb of paratha left behind. Someone muttered something about saving a bite for later, but it was too late. An angry glance was exchanged between cousins over the last meatball that had mysteriously disappeared moments ago. And just like that, the meal turned into a story of flavor, family, and the quiet chaos that only a truly delicious meal can cause.

Write an essay about either [a flamingo - or - TV episode]

A flamingo is one of the most recognizable and fascinating birds in the world, known for its striking pink feathers, long legs, and elegant posture.

What is a Flamingo?

Flamingos are large, social wading birds found in parts of Africa, the Middle East, the Caribbean, South America, and southern Europe. There are six species of flamingos, with the Greater Flamingo being the most widespread — and the only one naturally found in the Middle East, including parts of Saudi Arabia.

Where Do They Live?

Flamingos prefer shallow lakes, lagoons, and salt flats. In Saudi Arabia, they can sometimes be seen in coastal wetlands like those near the Red Sea, especially during the winter migration season. Flamingos aren't just beautiful birds — they're also a reminder of how diet, environment, and adaptation can shape the wonders of nature. Flamingos often stand on one leg and they live in large colonies — sometimes with thousands of birds — for protection and social interaction.

Read the following passage and answer the questions:

One day in 1969, John Rendall and Anthony Burke saw a real live lion cub in a London department store window. Feeling that a lion should not be kept this way, they bought him and took him home to live in Rendall's basement. The lion, which they named Kristian, is said to have been an affectionate and extremely cooperative cat that even used a giant kitty litter box. Kristian was pampered. He was brought on drives, strolls through the neighborhood, and even to restaurants. But when Kristian grew to almost 200 pounds (90 kilograms), it was decided that he should be released into the wild. Kristian was brought to Africa where he adapted to life in the wild and became the leader of a group of lions. A year later, Rendall and Burke travelled to Africa to say goodbye. They were warned that Kristian would not remember them. However, when Kristian saw his old friends, he ran towards them, stood on his back legs, and joyfully gave each of them a long and loving embrace..
